THE MCDONALD CASE.

The McDonald case, in San Francisco, is further testimony to the social fact that men will rarely be convicted for killing those who insult the wife, no matter who she may have been before marriage or what the foolishness of her conduct after marriage.... McDonald did not deny the killing of Mish, nor was there any concealment of the fact that Mrs. McDonald had been extremely foolish in her relations with Mish. There was a showing made, but substantiated only by the testimony of the defendant, and some strained construction of evidence concerning positions of the parties, that Mish, after applying a vile name to the wife of defendant, put his hand behind his as if to draw a weapon; but no weapon was found on his person. McDonald fired and killed him. Though the man was fatally wounded, he ran before falling, and McDonald pursued and again shot him. Of course the Judge charged the jury that if they believed the defendant shot in self-defense, he must acquit him, and also that the act of defense must rest upon the appearance of danger, even though it turns out that the appearance was false. The jury unquestionably based its verdict on the testimony of the defendant that he believed Mish was about to draw a weapon when he used vulgar language concerning the wife of defendant; but it also unquestionably considered the language used as a provocation and justification. So it will remain and go to the world that McDonald was acquitted of the killing of a human being because the man made an indecent assault upon the wife of the defendant, and did more than attack her integrity, for he stigmatized her as devoid of virtue, and as being a strumpet of the town. Whatever the refinements of the logic by which this verdict may be defended, it will remain a warning to all men who assail the wives of other men, that they do so at peril of their lives. Unless the killing in these cases was clearly in self-defense, or done under that belief, the acquittal can be attributed to no other cause than the indisposition, not to say positive refusal, of American juries to convict of murder husbands who kill those who defame wives. In this case it cannot be said that it was clearly or by unprejudiced witnesses shown that the killing was in self-defense, or under that belief, and so it is that public judgment of the verdict will stamp it as one of approval of the act of McDonald, because his wife was assailed in the very tenderest part of her reputation. However much we may moralize about the blindness of justice, and the non-bias of the law in its regard for human life, it remains that no man is hanged for killing another under such circumstances as those related. We are by no means prepared, nor ever will be, to set up or defend a code that in self-defense will rise superior to the laws of the land. The horse-whip on the highway for the back of the rascal who assails a good woman is more fitting punishment than the bullet. The husband who degrades by the lash, and lets live under its shame, the wretch who traduces his wife, metes out better and inflicts more merciless punishment than he who sends the rascal unshaven before his Maker for judgment. There is no offence to the human being that should justify killing, short of the necessity of defending life and limb of self, or of those dependent upon us. For society cannot afford to write a code that will make every man the judge of the character, intent and enormity of the offense, and the executioner under his own decree. When it does that, it will abandon all government of men, and give license to the reign of passion, folly, ignorance and misjudgment. But society, represented by juries of the country, does make exceptions when it says frankly and openly to its subjects: "In these cases fall upon and kill, and you shall go unharmed." Since the famous case of General St. Georges to the present, there have been no cases of men severely punished for taking the law into their own hands in defense of their wives and daughters, nor will there be, so long as men are swayed by the same passions and molded by the same influences that now determine their characters. It is sad enough to contemplate that there is a point in the economy of our social system when the rule of action provided by the wisdom of ages fails utterly to control men, or to inspire respect. It is humiliating to reflect that there is one point at which the law makes no successful stand, even though its open violation be admitted—a point at which we can only count the determination of what shall be the law of the case, to the individual most nearly related to the case.

Anti-Chinese Leagues are requested to pledge their members to smoke no Chinese-made cigars on and after July 4th.

Mrs. Peterson, a Norwegian, who beats her husband if he does not do the family work, has been committed to the Stockton asylum for the insane.

The Mint is now closed for the annual settlement, and deposits of crude bullion will not be received until operations are resumed in July. Deposits of refined bullion will be received until the 19th instant. Payment of sugar continues free, mostly from the Hawaiian Islands, the total last month was larger than for April, but not up to March, which yet stands as the heaviest in the history of the trade.

The carpet in the adjoining room of the Mint was taken up and hung this week. The carpet had been down several years. From the ashes was obtained a silver-and-gold brick weighing about twenty pounds, and valued at $2,000.

The Southern Pacific is rushing on the construction of the new bridge with great vigor. The track is now being laid in very rough ground and progress is necessarily slow. There are now about 1,500 men at work on this section, and the rate at present is about one-fifth of a mile per day.

The case of John W. McGrath, ex-Clerk of the Supreme Court, has been continued in Judge Toochy's Court until July 20th, to await Judge Wilson's decision as to his safety, and that he died believing it was necessary to do so to save his life; but we shall entertain the private conviction that Dr. McDonald killed Mish because the latter applied to the wife of the former the most infamous epithet to which tongue of man can be given, and that as a matter of fact, Dr. McDonald took no concern whatever of any possible menace to his own life.

AN ODD STRIKE.

On Tuesday, in San Francisco, about twenty thousand people—those who live the poorest way in the world, by the way, at restaurants—went hungry to labor because the waiters and waiters at the chief eating place struck. California has been happily exempt from strikes during all the season of turbulence at the East. It testifies to the better condition of wage-winners on this coast, and the content of the workers with their employment, and the regulations made therein. The waiters and two-maids strike is the first of any note that has ruffled the composure of Californians, and it is an odd strike, too. It is made because the employers' association have made and posted regulations obnoxious to the waiters. It was the right of the employers to make the regulations, though they were foolish to do so. One of these, and which was the chief cause of complaint, read that whoever was detected purloining any food or property would be looked on as a thief and discharged. Literally this was true. One detected in purloining would be a thief, and should be so looked upon. But why post it under the noses of the men, and before the eyes of all customers, so that it should read to all men practically, "the employees in this restaurant are honest only because they know of this regulation?" The cooks and waiters had a right to strike, but they were foolish to do so. They had the best of the case, and a remonstrance and protest would have brought about conference, and the same result have followed—for the men have won. Nearly all the restaurant proprietors against whom the strike was aimed have frankly admitted that they were wrong, and have taken down the offensive placard, which appears to be the product of the genius of one employer, who, after long persuasion, induced its adoption by the association.

"A slight ripple was created in the affairs of the Horse Department of the Fair Association yesterday afternoon by the disbarment of 'Patsy' the jockey, the champion of the track by President Green. Duffy, who rides for the Haggins stables, is next to Ike Murphy, the best jockey in the West, and the loss of his service is a severe blow to the stable, with whose success he has been so long connected. The track is in the hands of the ruling by President Green, and the circumstances surrounding it, were told to a Post-Dispatch reporter this morning by Mr. Green.

"Duffy was ruled off the track for three reasons," said he. "First, he was drunk; second, he was impudent; and third, he appeared in the grand stand and the clubhouse in his silksleeves. Duffy is a good jockey, but he is little short of a mirage that he has landed a winner. The horse was heavily backed for first place, and it would have been a great misfortune if he had lost the race through the fault of his rider."

"What was the impertinence charged against Duffy?" asked the reporter. "I sent him a short time after the Bon Air race in addition to noticing that he was drunk, I saw that he wore a clubhouse badge. When I asked him where he got it and took it away from him, he became very saucy, and I ordered him off."

"Is there any account of the withdrawal of the Haggins stable in the withdrawal of the Haggins stable?"

"No, there is not," Mr. Sullivan, who represents Mr. Haggins at the track, agrees with Mr. Duffy. "The stable is still open under the circumstances. Mr. Haggins I am confident, instead of condemning will approve of my action. As for Duffy's reinstatement it is very improbable. He has been disbarred for the whole season. Ben Ali would come in around to May Lady, and it was but little short of a miracle that he landed a winner. The horse was heavily backed for first place, and it would have been a great misfortune if he had lost the race through the fault of his rider."

When I asked him where he got it and took it away from him, he became very saucy, and I ordered him off."

Barns Burned—Grand Lodge of Colorado Masons.

May 16th.—A fire at 9 o'clock last night destroyed two barns in the northwestern suburbs of the city, supposed to be the work of a tramp, who was refused a few moments before the fire began. The barns were owned by the American Central and North American.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge, F. and A. M. (colored), closed a three days session in this city to-day. Delegates were present from eight states in the State. The more concluded to-night with a banquet and presentation.

The Water-log Steamer.

From (Sonoma) county, June 16th.—The steamer Arcata sank at 7:30 p. m. yesterday, some 150 yards from the dock, with part of her upper hull. At 10 o'clock the Monarch took hold of her and towed her off the rocks to sea, where she rolled over on her beams, and was lost at that point. The steamer of San August.

There was considerable wreckage coming in last night, but nothing of much value was saved. At 2 a. m. to-day the wrecker Whitelaw appeared and secured the remains of the upper hull, and the anchor was set by the Monarch, who had abandoned the idea and sailed for the city. The anchor had been so arranged by Captain Marsh that when the Monarch took hold of her they were able to bring the passengers and steamer of the Arcata are still here. The wind is now fifteen miles per hour.

A Boy Incendiary.

SAN JOSE, June 16th.—Louis Maynard, 10 years old, made two attempts to fire his mother's house this afternoon, because he refused to give him his dinner, according to the General Freight Agent of the Atchison Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad had a car load of the choicest strawberries picked at Aspinwall, and sent them to Boston in refrigerators, with 100 pounds of ice. The berries arrived in excellent condition, and were readily sold at 12 cents a quart, while they were bringing but a quarter of that price here. Additional shipments are being made, and a large trade is likely to grow up from this beginning.

The Summer Plague.—The sleep plague is again upon us in full force. During the past week or two tens of thousands have swarmed into the valley, running everywhere and eating up every grain, nothing not included. The great plague of 1850 is returning.
